

Extension Lecture on ‘Media, Culture, Society and their relationship with Geography’ organised in the Department of Geography, GDC Poonch

Report

The Department of Geography, Govt Degree College Poonch, organised an extension lecture on ‘Media, Culture, Society and their relationship with Geography’ on February 24, 2021. The lecture was delivered by Mr Inderjeet Singh, Assistant Professor (DSJ), University of Delhi. The occasion was graced by the presence of faculty and students of GDC Poonch, who enriched the programme through their valuable questions and subsequent discussions at the end of session.

Mr Inderjeet Singh, began his talk by defining the dynamism of media, culture, society and successfully established their strong relationship with the geography, through space and time. He also discussed at length the various sub-themes that shape the socio-politico and economic narratives in our society. The talk was punctuated at various points, by curious students, and faculty members, who sought the dig deeper into the issues concerning the gender politics, cultural diffusion and media politics and social geography at regional, national and global level.
